But what shall we say of Sivori's faultiess performances, to give the reader an adequate idea—er even a faint impression—of them? He is the embodiment of the spirit of music. And yet there must be some secret in his physicsi mechanism, which it would be interesting to the snatomist to unravel; for, while his tremendous tone and distinct execution denote great muscular power—exercised spparently without an effort—he has the most yetif figure—shbeit most compact and well proportioned—that we have ever seen among the sdult professors of the art musical. Then as to his executive feat: it would require the pen of the readlest stenographer, and the knowledge of an experienced practical musician—to say nothing of an eye and ear of the most acute eersibilities—(and to none of these qualifications can we lay claim)—duly to note the marvels which he performs.

LIBEL SUIT.—Webb vs. Bacon.—An action entered by James Watson Webb against Dr. D. F. Bacon. In the absence of bad, rather than from any good news, the Money and Stock Markets have somewhat improved. The rates of interest are about the same as the quotations of last week, but money is more accessible. The Banks are discounting the offerings of favorities at 6 per cent. The Tribune in the Summer of 1845, was commenced yetherday. The asserted libel is for stating that the Editor of the Courier ceased opposition to Mr. Webster to unaccount of receiving pecuniary accommodations from the friends of Mr. W. For defence it is contended that the article was justified by circumstances.—Mr. Webb. LIBEL SUIT .- Webb vs. Bacon .- An action en the article was justified by circumstances-Mr. Webb, after abusing Mr. Webster for 15 months, having suddenly ceased to abuse him, and Dr. B. had reason to suppose he did so from the cause stated. It was also proved by a previous attack made by Mr. Webb upon Dr. E. that at the most it was but a newspaper warfare. and the words complained of were explained by the remainder of the article. Mr. J. H. White, for defence, stated various facts in relation to the course of Mr. W. and contended that the complaint deserves but nominal damages, &c.

Mr. White, after stating the case on behalf of defence to which he showed that Mr. Webb first entered an acto which he showed that Mr. Webb first entered an action against the proprietors of The Tribune for asserted line as a portion of the publication, which is yet pending—that Dr. Bacon instituted a sult in the Circuit Court against the editor of the Courier for assertions made by him in his paper, and that the plaintiff commenced this action against Dr. B. in the Superior Court, arowing, in his paper, subsequently, that he had received no injury from the publication of Dr. B., but he wished to have a verdiciphere to offset one that might be got against him in the Circuit Court; showing that no injuries.

ry had accrued, but he was providing for a contingency that might possibly arise. Mr. W. contended that the articles complained of by plaintiff were, on the one hand, provoked, and on the other were a fair criticism on the articles in the Courier and Enquirer that caused them. He contended that the plaintiff was entitled, at most, but to nominal damages.

The Produce market is in no measure relieved from the great depression which has failen upon it—the difficulties in money negotiations still continuing in force, though as parties succeed in accommodating themselves to the present state of things, the pressure appears to be less severely felt. Navertheless theeffects of the astounding revulsion in trade is experienced with as much severity here as at other points, and from present indications there seems to be but little hope for immediate relief. Flour continues to accumulate rapidly, while at the same time only one or two buyers manifest any disposisame time only one or two buyers manifest any disposi-tion to operate at all, and these claim farther considera-ble concessions in their favor. Not a single transaction has fallen under our observation, and any quantity of good merchantable parcels can be obtained at $3 37;

The attention of shipmasters is directed to the following remarks of the New-Orleans Bulletin:

Although the rates of freight, both coastwise and to Europe rule somewhat lower than they have done recently, yet they continue higher than for along time previously, and offer a golden harvest to the shipping interest. This is not caused by the war, as erroneously stated in the Northern papers by their New-Orleans correspondents, but results from the deficiency of vessels to carry off the enormous amount of produce here for ship ment; and commenced before hostilities. The cry about privateers may deter some few shipmasters from coming to the port, but it is such a bugbear that it can have but little induence on them generally. Their heads are too clear, and their judgment too sound, for them to brightened by shadows. Nor need they apprehend any material decline from the recent high rates attracting too many to the port. On Tuesday last there were nine ships and eight barks LESS in port than at the same time last year, while the excess of receipts, this year over last, would supply cargoes for two to three hundred vessels. We state them in round numbers, as follows:
